Margin pressures expected for lemon growers and exporters in 2022

Detail Introduction:

Lemon consumption has grown steadily in key markets as a result of the product's perceived health a and its versatility. In the next few years, expanding plantings in the southern hemisphere will translatincreased counter-seasonal exports to the US, Europe, and Asia to ensure year-round availability.

Lemon consumption has grown steadily in key markets as a result of the product's health halo and verification in the next few years, expanding plantings in the southern hemisphere will translate into increased conseasonal exports to the US, Europe, and Asia to ensure year-round availability.

While demand is still considered healthy, even in the presence of a fading 'Covid effect,' challenges all Margin pressures are expected for lemon growers and exporters in 2022, as machinery, fertilizer, agrochemical, labor, and transportation costs have significantly increased. However, amid a challeng environment, opportunities still exist, particularly in the organic lemon market.