

Onion Prices Recover

Detail Introduction :

The old onions in the basements of Gansu and Northeast China are entering the final stage, and the surplus is very small; the fresh onions in Yunnan are affected by the rainy weather and the shipments are not smooth, and the prices in the producing areas continue to improve.

At this stage, the overall surplus of onions in various production areas in China is not large, and the goods are mainly concentrated in Gansu and Heilongjiang production areas. The transaction situation in Gansu varies. The old onions are expected to end in mid-April, and the local new season onions have been transplanted one after another.

At present, domestic onions are mainly produced in Yunnan. The shipments of Xichang and Dayi in Sichuan are very small. Nanyang, Henan is expected to start listing at the end of April. Due to the shortage of supply, the market has been improving recently, and the price of onions is expected to rise in the short term. However, due to uncertain factors such as the epidemic and weather, the specific market outlook needs to be closely followed.