Florian Stark, managing director of Früchte Stark - Kartoffel & Zwiebel Handel, which among other things, a wholesale stand at the Frankfurt Frischezentrum, sells his goods to food retailers and wholesalers, but p catering customers.

Stark still offers butcher's onions as cold storage goods from Spain but says their quality is "catastrophic." the beginning of the week, I have stopped selling these goods. However, the first small quantities of Spring have already arrived; these could also be resold directly the same night. But the subsequent delivery is de because everything in Valencia is underwater."

"This week, I was able to offer ten pallets of onions. However, not much will follow at the end of the week f With Holland onions, we try to balance the supply, of which we can offer about 5-6 pallets. One pallet of bu onions contains 40x25kg bags. With the Dutch goods, we are at 50-55x25kg bags per pallet. The quality o Dutch goods is appropriate for the time and better than the cold storage goods," Stark concludes.
